From the annuals of the 1927 Virginian to the 1967 Blue and Gray, forty years of tradition have been molded into the character of Washington-Lee High School. Four decades of faculty, classes, academics, activities, and sports have helped shape W-L's long-standing heritage.

With each passing year, additions are made by the student body and the faculty which contribute to the special spirit that have given W-L the special traditions we value. This yearbook will attempt to serve as a reminder of those traditions each of us had a part in introducing and preserving.

FACULTY AND ADMINISTRATION

1927-1967

Principal Staff Organizes All School Functions

Mr. O. U. Johansen, Principal

To keep a complicated institution such as Washington-Lee functioning properly involved many specialized departments within the school network.

The chief executive of the entire school program, Mr. O. U. Johansen, had the difficult duty of synchronizing all the activities that took place in the school. Invaluable in this huge task were the vice-principals, who took the responsibility in certain areas of administration. Mrs. Doris Matthews, besides holding the position of dean of girls, co-ordinated the student activities throughout the year. Continuing into his second year as dean of boys, Mr. Boyd Webb had many other duties such as traffic control, pupil attendance, and data processing. Mr. Richard Blocker's duties as director of instruction encompassed homebound instruction, study halls, and the master schedule.

The principals depended heavily on the capable secretarial staff to type, telephone, keep the books, and mail letters. Because of this laborious task, it became necessary to hire six additional part-time secretaries.

Lines of students waited in the Guidance Office for assistance with schedules, information on colleges, or job opportunities. The Guidance department gave direction and counsel to make the path easier for the troubled students. After twelve years as a biology teacher, Mr. Donald Lewis joined the guidance department, raising the staff number to eight.

Often behind the scenes, but very important to school life was the school personnel. The nurse managed to maintain student health records and administered to sick students. Throughout the day and half the night, the custodial staff worked long, hard hours to keep the school in first-class condition.

Eight new teachers, three in languages, two in social studies, one in science, a librarian, and a physical education instructor readily adjusted to W-L life.

ACADEMICS

1927-1967

Academic Progress Spiced Up By New Courses

Students with a desire to achieve the high scholastic standards of W-L listen attentively during class time.

These boys welding metal together learn in Industrial Art courses practical skills they can use a lifetime.

Forty years have seen the Academic Department grow, broaden, revise and evolve into a department of high scholastic standards and curricula. Constant evaluation of courses and teaching methods continue to insure the student body of the most beneficial instruction. Beginning some forty years ago with seventeen teachers, the faculty has enlarged to one hundred and nine which makes it possible to present a greater variety of courses in diversified fields of interest.

A tide of exceptional courses came in this year to brighten up the academic programming. Keeping pace with the fast moving occupational world the Business Department offered Data Processing as a yearly course for the first time.

From the two laboratories with which the school began, W-L's Science Department has expanded into a wing of the building with modern labs containing extensive equipment. For the science orientated students, two new courses, Biology II and Physics II, presented the chance to go to greater depth in experimentation.

The American Civilization course for juniors and the World Literature course for seniors begun last year, attained acceptance and popularity which continued through this year. The English Department gave students demonstrating exceptional ability in the theatrical realm Drama II for more intensive study into dramatics.

To facilitate study, the library has developed enrichment materials such as foreign language collections. Two microfilm viewers and a photocopier became proud supplements to the library. One interesting aspect was the art collection on loan from the National Gallery.

To assist the school publications, the music and Thespian programs, the Art Department added a practical course called Design II. Both the Music and Art Departments worked throughout the year to brighten the halls with murals and to liven the assemblies with melody.

Music rings in the night as the choir and orchestra rehearse for the annual Christmas Concert.

A new addition to the shelves of the school library fascinates a student with free time in his study hall.

Charlie Caudill utilizes one of the traditional American rights of free speech in differing with a teacher.

Clovia Chinn works diligently to complete a touch-up job on several still life sketches for her art class.

With mischief lurking in her eyes, junior art student Becky Snider skillfully designs chessman out of clay.

Stopped in momentary contemplation, junior Joy Pyles decides the next stroke of the brush in her painting.

The California coast provides an inspiration for art student Marty Posiask as the canvas comes to life.

Applying modern know-how to the noble art of weaving, senior Reid Lewis experiments with the loom in art.

Striving to achieve the overall mood, senior Winnie Owens carefully studies the details of her subject.

Work of Creative Art Students Aid Publications

Utilizing hints given in a magazine, Virginia Parker puts her artistic talents to work through india ink.

Dept. Offers Wide Range Of Business Courses

Aware of the value of typing skills in any vocation, Linda Parrish perfects this important practical art.

Struggling with sales prices, overhead, and percentages, Eddie Smith finds business math takes intensified work.

Working with an adding machine requires both concentration and understanding on the part of Larry Kaul.

Change Of Pace Classes Utilized By Students

An inspiring lecture captures the attention of Noland Montgomery during Mr. William Cleary's English class.

Senior English Literature student Jerry Coyne looks over notes in hopes of participating in class review.

Journalism student Rosemary Hamm anxiously awaits introduction into the fascinating world of photography.

Dabbling in the arts during the AEM Seminar, Carolyn Kruse comments on Mary Emurian's painting techniques.

Senior English Literature student Bruce Halliburton contemplates a topic for his class discussion group.

Situated in a journalistic atmosphere, Karen Hansen plans a text to accompany her photography assignment.

Wandering in the playground of his imagination, an art student comes upon an idea he can chart.

Gordon Macrae ponders over important information concerning German Civilization in preparation for a quiz.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

Lab Facilities Improve Foreign Language Studies

Reviewing her text, Mary Saunders studies in preparation for an upcoming tape test in the language lab.

The long verbal drills in the lab seem to lose hold of Mike Martin as he drifts to unawareness.

During French class, Nancy Shattrick concentrates on responding with the correct verb construction.

Considering possible translations of a phrase, Terry Parent and Alexa Albertson tune in to a French tape.

Friends, Romans, and Countrymen all play an important role in history for Denny McAuliffe's Latin class.

Oral work gives Martha Karas, Karen Chrisman and Gary Wallen listening and speaking comprehension.

Displaying ability in recently learned tennis skills, Debbie Grey gracefully executes a serve over the net.

Competition gets rough and excitement mounts in a gym class participation unit such as this football game.

Preoccupied with the mishaps of her gym class, Miss Barbara Reinwald and feline companion muse pensively.

Although the trees and the bushes may not survive the sport, archery appears to be popular with jr. girls.

Gym Students Strain To Attain Physical Fitness

With her bow string taut and arrow poised, a student in physy. ed. aims hopefully at the intended target.

Intent upon hitting the ball over the net, Carol Kent practices tennis as a means of warmth in 1st period.

Fred Hipple races around an opponent while making a try for the goal during a soccer game in gym class.

Fascinated with the professional techniques of Lana Hamilton, Julie Cooper views a new method of sewing.

HOME ECONOMICS

Foreign Christmas Foods Prepared In Home Ec

Preparing to finish a dress, Sr. Angela Galante concentrates on threading her machine in Home Ec. class.

One of the varied home economics courses stimulates the domestic arts besides the enjoyment of good food.

Julie Cooper aids a junior-sized W-L student with his coat as the child development class comes to a close.

With an assortment of costumes and bags, the child development crew appears ready and eager for Halloween.

One of the charges of the home ec. dept. finds herself the center of attention during a group activity.

Louella Canody carefully measures sugar to make icing for the finishing touch to the cake baked in Home EC.

With the aid of onlooker Bob Wright, electronics student Bill Thompson tests the resistance of a tuner.

Wearing goggles in Woodworking I for safety, Russel Mason and Gerald Williams plane a surface on a boat.

While listening to advice from Mr. Paras, Tom Russell carefully checks over a horizontal circuit on a T.V.

Industrial Arts Presents Practical Aid To Students

Contributing practical advice, Mr. Hans-Peter Klose encourages Don Tucker on the blueprints for his boat.

Mutual co-operation moves the wiring job along rapidly as Tom Russell confers with Mohamed Hadid on the next move.

Learning by doing is an important aspect of the industrial art courses at W-L as shown in this classroom.

Student librarians find a chance to try out the duplicator machine, a part of the equipment in the library.

Student assistants in the library learn about library procedures and help keep the books properly shelved.

LIBRARY

Photocopier, Microfilm, Aid Students In Library

The library can be utilized as a place for research, study, or in this instance, just plain contemplation.

Taking advantage of the resources in the library, senior Dave Logan devotes study hall to his term paper.

Absorbing information for research, Tom Wachtel takes advantage of one of the many sources in the library.

The library, with an abundance of enrichment materials, offers a convenient place in which to study.

MATHEMATICS

Mathematics Department Presents Real Challenge

Algebra student Lee Sneddon appears somewhat dazed by Colonel Kenneth Thiebaud's explanation of a problem.

Jerry Bonn quietly ponders the best method of tackling a difficult problem at the board in AP Math III.

Mr. Springer's geometry lecture seems a world away to Annette Allyea as her thoughts drift out the window.

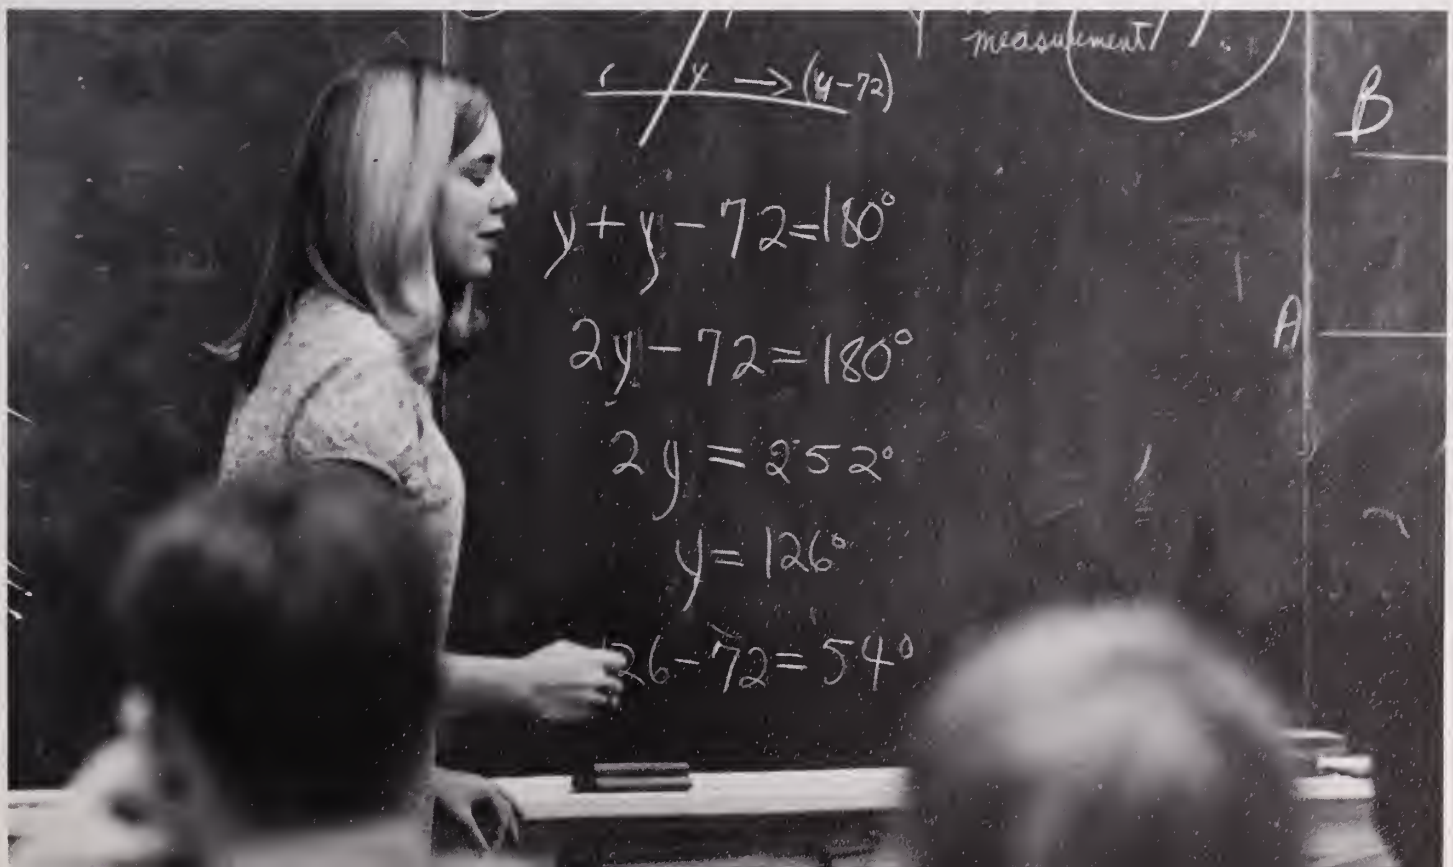

Referring back to an earlier portion of the problem, Eddie Rejuney finishes math work at the blackboard.

An understanding smile crosses Kathie Whitter's face as she grasps the meaning of a principle in Algebra.

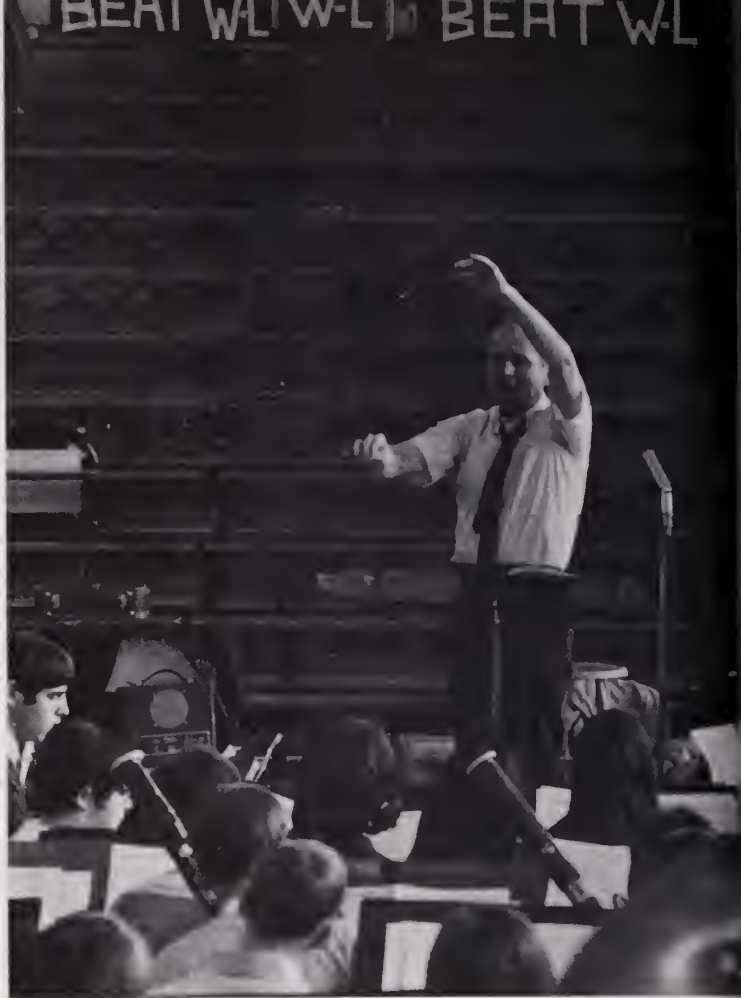

Relief floods over Holly Hawthorne when she discovers that her geometric calculations came out correctly.

The 1966 Music Festival scene, Campbell Gym, is reflected in festival member Howard Bill's sousaphone.

School competition momentarily subsides as Mr. Weston Nobel conducts joint practice for the Music Festival.

One e anda two e anda resounds as John O'Neill, Bill Weaver and the rest of Uncle Freddy's fifers blow on.

A hushed audience combines with the special voice of Madrigal Jeff Bestic to set a Christmas atmosphere.

MUSIC

Festival Provides Free Entertainment For County

John O'Neill, Valerie Hauch, and Lee Hudson pause to grin at the camera at the halftime of a football game.

Senior Danny Roberts mothers a home-grown rabbit, one of a group of animals raised in his Biology II Class.

Jan Simmons makes careful mental observations on part of an experiment done by her chemistry lab partner.

Through the year, Mrs. Jeannette Tolhurst attempts to instill in her students an understanding of biology.

Science Oriented Students Offered Biology Two

Using correct laboratory procedure, sr. Liston Carnie prepares a solution for an upcoming lab experiment.

Fascinated by the results of a chemistry experiment, junior Chuck Sara observes phosphorus burning in air.

Putting to work his past experience at biology, Philip Nickle measures water in the making of a potato agar.

Science student classmates prepare to observe any noticeable reactions during Lynn Storie's experiment.

Social Studies Make Students Conscious Of Civil Duties

Showing a wily grin of knowledge, sr. Richard Merriman waits to give his solution to a problem of government.

During a discussion on types of governments, senior John Swain ponders over a thought-provoking problem.

Social studies students Charlie Caudill, Alice Paterick, and Jim Helms quietly voice their own opinions.

Disagreeing with Mr. Book's political views, Mike Neuman mentally constructs a critical argument.

Senior Keen Holland gives his opinion of world affairs during a discussion on current events in government.

W-L Yearbook Commemorates 40th Anniversary

Monica Newberry, Editor-in-Chief

Tradition reigned in the 1967 Blue and Gray. Commemorating the 40th year of publication, the Washington-Lee yearbook, today known as the Blue and Gray, had an anniversary theme. Photographs from past issues, including some found in the book by the old title, The Virginian, appeared in the 1967 issue.

Besides the additions made to celebrate the anniversary year, several noticeable changes in format occurred. The picture style of school staff members changed. Instead of the formal pose settings, teachers, secretaries, and custodians found themselves caught in casual circumstances. For the purpose of convenience both staff and senior sections added individual indexes.

The subscription drive ran for several weeks after Christmas as Blue and Gray staff members set up stands at various locations around the school.

Tension increased as the deadlines drew closer, yet despite all, the 1967 Blue and Gray met the final deadline.

Penman Takes Over Football Game Concessions

On the second floor of the White House sixth period, the Penman staff planned the 1966-67 volumes of the prestige publication. W-L's literary magazine has regularly received awards in both state and southeast regional competition, and also had the honor of being sold at Brentano's bookstores during the school year. Penman's staff had the task of selecting and editing materials submitted by students and teachers for the fall, winter, and spring editions. Additions to the magazine this year included reviews and interviews, and the staff adopted a subscription policy for the three seasonal issues.

After the approximately eight-hundred and fifty copies of Penman went on sale in English classes, the receipts still left the staff with a deficit to make up by other means. This year, Penman operated football game concessions in addition to hooking up the popcorn machine outside the main office once a week. Staff members upheld tradition by selling May Day flowers again this year.

Newspaper Staff Introduces Changes In Format

CROSSED SABRES

The Crossed Sabres Staff introduced the 35th volume of the school newspaper in September with a two page edition, published once a week. A change from last year's bi-monthly newspaper, this year's Crossed Sabres resulted in a timelier and more accurate account of the news and special events of each week.

Because the changes required more expenses than previously, the staff undertook several projects. A classified ad section gave more income to the Crossed Sabres, as did the traditional staff-sponsored Turkey Hop, celebrating W-L's victory over GW.

A new way of club reporting replaced the beat system used last year. To ease the difficulties of the relatively small staff, they installed a Crossed Sabres mail box in the main office. This way, club secretaries could mail accounts of special activities to the newspaper. With the addition of a club news column, the system assured complete coverage when wanted.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Student Council Sponsors Successful MS Drive

Each day sixth period, counting the upper floor of the White House, the Student Council worked hard and planned carefully, with the aid of a new sponsor, to set up educational and interesting activities for the school.

In the fall, the Student Council sponsored a leadership training conference opened to all interested students. This conference helped to bring out and develop the qualities of leadership found in many of Washington-Lee's student body.

The proceeds from this year's highly successful charity drive, sponsored annually by the SCA, went to the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation. The purpose of this program centered, not only on collecting money for the foundation, but also to inform and to make aware the students of the symptoms and treatments of the disease.

Near the end of January, the SCA sponsored an exchange program to Grafton, Wisconsin, on which thirty excited and interested students spent an informative week.

MS milk bottles show signs of class and school spirit as shown by the large contributions to the SCA drive.

ALPHA SERVICE CLUB

Alpha Holds Free Car-Wash

For Entire Faculty

Alpha President Kathi Studer pauses a moment during a meeting to clarify a confusing point for a member.

The Alpha Service Club members kept a full schedule of activities in addition to all the normal work bestowed on a student of Washington-Lee. The girls gave up part of Christmas shopping time to decorate a Christmas tree at the White Hall Sanitarium for the elderly. They also took part in the familiar filling of a Christmas basket to give some needy family a holiday dinner. Bake sales furnished money for these purposes when the need arose for additional funds.

For something new and different to add to the year, members ushered for the American Light Opera Company. The girls also planned and carried out a party for some of the children who took part in the Head Start Program. Members spent many worth-while hours planning for the event. The wide variety of projects even included something for the faculty. The club held a free car-wash for all teachers willing to take advantage of this very profitable opportunity open to them.

ART CLUB

Club Exhibits Artistic Talents

Designing Greetings

Assortments of hearts and flowers surround Art Club members as they create designs for a group project.

Numbered among several organizations at Washington-Lee whose purpose concerns the promotion or honoring of artwork, the Art Club served students with the most general interest in the field. The Art Club started the year's activities by replenishing the treasury with proceeds from bake sales held during the fall semester.

Working from October until Christmas, the club learned word-block cutting techniques from shop teachers Mr. Hans-Peter Klose, and then drew up designs for hand-printed Christmas cards. The finished cards went on sale to W-L teachers shortly before Christmas. This constituted not only a method of raising money, but an opportunity to exercise the talent of the members. The decorations in the cafeteria at Christmas were provided by the club.

Throughout the year the club went on trips in and around Washington, specifically the Potomac waterfront, for the purpose of sketching.

BIBLE CLUB

Members Share Christmas With Nursing Home

The purpose of the Bible Club, though not specifically defined, helped to develop in the members a better understanding of the Bible and applying the principles to everyday life. The club aimed to make the school, as well as the home, a warmer and stronger place to live by following the Scriptures.

The group enjoyed the warmth of the Christmas season and participated in a holiday theatrical program at a nursing home. The club also provided a service for the W-L student body.

Student speakers and outside speakers who presented and discussed student problems, drew interested students to meetings. The Bible Club, unlike most clubs at Washington-Lee, maintained a year round open membership. In addition to discussions, the group formed smaller committees to study Biblical history and the content of the Book itself.

Attentiveness is the key word as Bible Club members listen with open ears to sponsor Mr. Thomas Christie.

BETA SERVICE CLUB

Beta Furnishes Monthly Calendar Of Activities

Overflowing with community spirit Beta Service Club members make lollipop favors for deserving children.

A dime-a-daffodil brought early spring for those W-Lites met by a Beta Service Club member during April. The speedy students who made it to the bake and doughnut sales after school found themselves equally fortunate. Doughnut profits helped send a girl to Girls' State this summer, and Beta gave proceeds from other sales to CARE, Red Cross, and Operation Headstart. In addition to money, the Beta members donated time and effort to filling Christmas stockings for children at Arlington Hospital and stuffing envelopes for the Tuberculosis Association.

Washington-Lee too, received the benefits of Beta's many projects. The girls provided coffee and cookies for several of the teachers' meetings during March and April. Posting a monthly calendar of school activities in the central hall and polishing trophies in the trophy case launched two more ambitious activities for the club. A slumber party climaxed the girls' busy year with a well earned and enjoyable rest.

DELTA SERVICE CLUB

Members Shine Trophy Cases, Memorial Plaque

Listening intently, Senior Dee Avery mentally checks plans made for future car washes and doughnut sales.

Although faced with the confusion of re-organization and induction of new members, Delta quickly started to work performing services for the community. Spending one Saturday afternoon stuffing envelopes for the Tuberculosis Association headed the list. Charged with the all-important job of keeping W-L's trophy cases polished, enthusiastic members performed the task twice this year. They also took on the responsibility of cleaning the long-forgotten War Memorial Plaque in the library.

Besides the usual bake sales, members employed other unique money raising projects to replenish the club treasury. The list included two Saturday car washes and selling chocolate turkeys at Thanksgiving. Making and selling holly corsages to help promote Christmas spirit comprised an additional activity.

Delta also participated in many USO activities. For one project, eager members baked Christmas cookies for servicemen stationed in the Washington Area.

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION CLUB

Job Application Assembly

Sponsored By D.E. Club

The Distributive Education Club sponsored an assembly describing important aspects of properly applying for a job. A representative from the C&P Telephone Company interestingly presented the topic. She and her assistant put on several skits demonstrating the proper dress and manners during a job interview. The D.E. Club also participated in the annual filling of a Christmas basket, presenting one along with homeroom baskets at the assembly. The members of the club also spent long hours selling candy and fruitcakes.

Towards the end of the year, the D.E. members presented a magnificent "Employers' Appreciation Banquet."

In April, the Distributive Education District Contest took place, in which twelve area schools were able to participate. The contest chose the outstanding D.E. student, sending him on to the state and later possibly the national contest. The selection of the Distributive Education Club of the year also took place at this time.

FRENCH CLUB

Club Becomes Accustomed To French Cullinary

This year's French Club activities gave all the members a fine sample of French cooking. A progressive dinner marked the beginning of fall events with members traveling from house to house for each different course. This not only gave them a tantalizing taste of foreign cullinary, but enabled the members to acquaint themselves with the others. In February the club offered the student body and faculty a chance to try French food at a dinner they held in the cafeteria. This highly successful annual affair helped replenish the treasury.

January highlighted this year's projects with an assembly sponsored by the club at which a native Frenchman talked and answered questions on the French youth of today, who were found to be similar to American teenagers.

In June, members assembled funds which they had earned during the year into a scholarship. Awarded upon graduation, the scholarship given to a deserving French student proved gratifying to everyone.

Planned to attract visitors to the French Club's dinner, a travel poster finds a place in the cafeteria.

F.H.A. Members Travel To Williamsburg Homes

Future Homemakers and sewing class members incorporate ideas to make plans for the Spring Fashion Show.

The atmosphere of The Good Earth, an area Chinese restaurant, and a fine meal provided a pleasant way for this year's old and new F.H.A. members to become acquainted. Following this introduction into the year's activities, a calendar of projects for the year was set up. The F.H.A. made money as well as appeased student hunger every school day morning by selling doughnuts and milk in the snack bar of the cafeteria.

During the Christmas season, the girls put needle and thread to use and made stuffed animals for needy children. The most impressive plans for the year involved a trip to Williamsburg over the Easter holidays. The main activities consisted of sight-seeing and noting decor in the beautiful old homes.

A French Chef from Giant Foods spoke to the homemakers as he prepared a meal of gourmet foods in the home ec kitchen at one club meeting. He talked about French cookery and gave tips on home preparation of such foods.

Throughout the year Future Teachers of America have become acquainted with many aspects and phases which this prospective profession involves. The club originated an interesting undertaking, Project Help, which consisted of tutoring students with problems in a subject. Qualified members spent frequent after-school hours at this job. In another project connected with the school, members laboriously corrected papers for the ever-worked faculty.

By observing classes at Woodlawn Elementary School, participants saw various techniques used by different teachers. The club organized an assembly with W-L teachers who discussed the different aspects of college. This aim was to familiarize students with education after high school.

The development of a new and successful project took form during the year with hopes that it would eventually become tradition. This involved the special tutoring of children at Drew Elementary School, which appealed to many future teachers.

Future Teacher officers Michele LaMotte and Debby Darr plan with members for an assembly concerning college.

GAMMA SERVICE CLUB

Spirited Game Posters Back-Up Varsity Teams

Upholding the principle of service to the community, Gamma Service Club commenced the new year with a special after-school bake sale in cooperation with the school-wide drive for Multiple Sclerosis. The money earned from other club sponsored bake sales helped to fill a Thanksgiving basket for a needy family in the area. Writing encouraging letters to soldiers in Viet Nam became the Christmas project.

Besides sponsoring dances, club members also supported the teams by making posters which were proudly displayed in the halls before each game. As the end of the year drew nigh, the members elected the officers for the next year. Then, in an initiation for the officers and a picnic for all, the members ventured to a nearby park for an outdoor barbecue which concluded a very active year for the members of Gamma.

GIRLS' ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

G.A.A. Offers Broad Variety Of Sports To Girls

Enjoying the vigorous sport of basketball, underclass girls participate in after-school G.A.A. intramurals.

Through the years, W-L has placed a strong emphasis on educating its students physically as well as mentally. The 1966-1967 school year proved no different as far as this goal was concerned.

The Girls' Athletic Association offered all interested Washington-Lee girls an opportunity to develop skills in a wide variety of sports. Girls could be found almost every day in the gym, outside, or across the street, participating in the sports offered. The wide range of activities included everything from badminton and table tennis to basketball and bowling.

Each sophomore, junior, and senior gym class elected representatives at the beginning of the school year. These girls planned the schedule for sports to be offered to the group as a whole.

The competition in each sport was based on a round-robin system. Seasonal awards teas held throughout the year honored the champions of the respective sports.

GIRLS' CREW

Exhausting Hours Spent In Training For Meets

At least ten Washington-Lee girls planned on finding the way down to Mexico City, site of the Pan-American Games during the summer of 1967. The Girls' Crew, after paddling through the competition, enjoyed the exciting atmosphere of a foreign country.

Throughout the school year the girls practiced many exhausting hours to prepare for the meet. Members trained during all seasons, although cold weather workouts limited the sessions to Saturdays. As the weather warmed up, twice a week periods increased to a grueling twice a day during the summer.

The Crew used the facilities of the Potomac Boat Club, making it less a school club or sport. Kayak maintenance, racing trips and the special purchase of a faster K-4 Kayak became possible through donut sales and Girls' Crew dances. These dances, a familiar and pleasant part of the school's social life, drew large crowds who enjoyed the casual atmosphere.

Weapons in hand, Girls' Crew members stand ready to shove off and follow the setting sun down the river.

GO-GO BOYS

Go-Go Boys Turn Thespians In Half-Time Skits

With raised fists and smiling faces, the Go-Go Boys supply the 1966-1967 team with undaunted enthusiasm.

The Washington-Lee student body owes much to the 1966-1967 Go-Go Boys. Crowded together in a small section of the bleachers, watching basketball games and important wrestling meets, the large group of senior boys sat—for a moment. Then the noise started. They yelled, chanted, cheered, and did virtually everything possible to let the boys out on the floor, know that the students stood behind them.

The group also provided half-time entertainment, performing skits denoting the strength of the W-L Generals. Dressed in the opposing teams uniforms, two of the boys chased each other around the floor of the gymnasium until the General overtook the opposition. The boys planned the cheers and skits for each event at meetings held regularly prior to the game.

School spirit at W-L has traditionally been great but the added noise of the Go-Go Boys seemed to make it just a little bit greater.

GERMAN CLUB

Authentic German Band Performs For Members

The German Club got off to a rolling start when an authentic German Band performed at the September meeting. One of the club's first official activities came when enthusiastic members donned cut-off jeans and sweatshirts as they devoted a Saturday afternoon to re-painting the lines of the student parking lot.

The interested members discovered much about the country and the customs of its people through the movies and varied speakers the club sponsored at meetings.

In January they took time out for a more enjoyable phase of learning. Faced with the pleasant problem of choosing either "Wiener Schnitzel" or "Sauerbraten" most of the members rapidly settled this question and spent an interesting evening at the popular Washington Restaurant 823.

Following in the footsteps of last year's club, the members gathered all the money from the treasury, mainly accumulated from bake sales, and decided to send this money to the German Orphanage in Washington.

Discussion of the German Club activities hold Terry Bazzarre's rapt attention as he listens to a speaker.

Students Become Familiar With W-L Regulations

Mohammed Hadid and Louie Celorio discuss problems encountered at W-L with other international students.

Many students foreign to the United States and many American students constituted the membership of the International Club. Here they met other students faced with the similar problems of adjusting to a different country and a new school simultaneously. Together they discussed the customs of each country represented and contrasting and comparing customs. The American students in the club assisted on familiarizing the foreign students with the traditions and regulations of Washington-Lee.

To get acquainted, the club took a bicycle trip down the C and O Canal. At meetings which were held every other week, foreign films were shown to give members a visual impression of other nations of the world. A group of international students began a unique community service project. Attending different functions around the community, this panel discussed the customs of each country and the difficulties found in adapting to a new situation upon arrival in the Washington area.

Kappa's Hard-Earned Money Supports Greek Boy

The 1966-1967 school year proved a busy but rewarding one for the more than thirty-five members of Kappa Service Club. The girls donated much time and effort in working on projects to aid the school as well as the community and the world.

The group, including the new members, kicked the year off on a gala note with a slumber party. Selling confetti at football games, and planning and building the float for the G.W. game occupied many fall afternoons and evenings.

The holiday season set the group in full swing when they sold candy for charitable purposes as well as for boosting the club treasury.

The Greek orphan boy which Kappa supported proved to be the most rewarding donation of service by the club. Each month the group drew ten dollars from the treasury to support the sixteen year old.

As a climax to a highly successful year, Kappa, held another slumber party for the much deserving members.

KEY SERVICE CLUB

Key Touches-Up Lines On Students' Parking Lot

Early in September the Key Service Club started off the year by removing unsightly trash from the senior court. The club sold "Beat G.W." signs donating the proceeds from these sales to the Multiple Sclerosis Drive which took place throughout November. Entering a club float with the theme of "wreck G.W." in the Thanksgiving Day Game competition, they received the honor of tying for third place.

At the Yorktown versus W-L football game, the members kept themselves busy. They sponsored a half-time skit and sold confetti to the crowds during the game. Following the Hammond game December 16th, and the Stuart game February 11th, the members hosted after-game dances held in the Little Theater.

Those who use the student parking lot remained indebted to the Key Club for the fine white lines. The repainting of these lines repeated a project similar to one undertaken by the 1962 Key Service Club.

Concentrating on the business at hand, Dennis McCausland mentally ponders a list of future club projects.

Tracing the scholastic destiny of W-L seniors, Linda Beach posts additions to the Keyettes bulletin board.

KEYETTES

Keyettes Send Articles To Soldiers In Viet Nam

Keyette Kitty Clark picks a comfy chair to cut name slips for the club-sponsored college bulletin board.

The Keyette Club energetically worked this year to serve the school and community. Numerous school projects included constructing a float for the Thanksgiving Day Game, selling pizza after the PSAT tests, and ushering at the school theatrical productions.

In the area of community service, the Keyettes collected money for the Cerebral Palsy Drive and sent clothing to the John Lamb Foundation. Sharing the Christmas spirit and joy, the girls sang hymns with the patients at Arlington Community hospital. The club's welfare programs extended beyond the boundaries of the community when the Keyettes sent such articles as toothpaste, batteries and razorblades to the soldiers in Viet Nam in early spring.

Girls from other service clubs assisted the club by modeling in the Keyette originated Spring Fashion Show. This presentation included hairdressing and make-up hints besides the "mod" fashions. Chosen members attended the Keyette Convention held in Roanoke, Virginia.

Senior Richard Merriman expresses views in favor of the Law Club field trip to New York in early spring.

Describing the snowy trip to New York and the United Nations, president Andre Loustalot takes the podium.

In order that club members might go on a two-day educational jaunt to the United Nations Building in New York, the Law Club sponsored a combination dance and hootenanny in which they netted over 150 dollars. After using necessary expenses for the trip, they contributed the rest of the money to school publications.

Throughout the year, the members received advice and guidance on law careers from guest speakers. Early in October, a Georgetown University law student spoke on courses and classes needed to prepare for a law career.

As a community service club project for Christmas, the members made and signed over five thousand leaflets urging safety on the nation's highways, especially during the winter season. Members made trips to nearby shopping centers to distribute the leaflets. In April, the club held a mock jury trial in which after many a heated debate and discussion, the defendant was acquitted. Later on, a judge was on hand to speak about his career.

MODERN DANCE CLUB

Dancers Interpret Mars In 1986 For Audience

A gym usually provides a place for basketball games, gymnastics, or other rigorous sports. Many found it surprising to see dancers prancing under the basket hoops and gymnastic equipment.

Every Wednesday afternoon the Washington-Lee Modern Dance Club transformed the downstairs gym into a dance studio. The girls, striving for personal satisfaction, grace, and poise, did limbering up exercises and interpreted original ideas into dance routines.

Membership in the club opened at the beginning of the school year to all interested girls. Each prospective member auditioned for the sponsor and several members. Seven girls consisting of four seniors, a junior, and two sophomores gained membership into the club.

The club worked all year in preparation for the spring program entitled "Mars 1986", which also included talented junior girls who met with success in the Modern Dance unit. The club also appeared at community functions.

MAJORETTES

Majorettes Twirl In Gay Apple Blossom Parade

W-Lites had many a chance to view the talented 1966-67 Majorettes. Instead of just twirling at football games, the girls used pom-poms and silk scarves to add spice to the routines. They also twirled with fire at four games and brightened the Thanksgiving Game with a variety of colored helium balloons.

Of the many competitions which the Majorettes entered, one of the most exciting took place in Winchester, Virginia during the Apple Blossom Festival held in May. They also added to the festivities at the annual Memorial Day parade in Falls Church, as well as in several other competitions held in Maryland.

In order to meet the entrance fee in many of the competitions, the girls sold Heath Candy during the winter months and held several bake sales during the spring.

Because of many hours of hard work, the Majorettes were able to feel justly proud of a year filled with excitement, fun, and talent.

Andi Koerner sports her brightly sequined uniform as she sells balloons to boost funds for the Majorettes.

Club Heads For Hills, Horses In Fair Weather

As Mounted General members Reid Dudley and Alice Eldridge parade, others watch for various techniques.

When the weather permitted, the enthusiastic Mounted Generals went horseback riding at Pattie's Stable near Annandale or at the Reston Riding Ring. Practicing weekly definitely proved advantageous this spring when this active club demonstrated proficiency in the Tenth Annual Horse Show. Boasting an English day of field and ring events, cross-country riding and a Western day of pole-bending, rodeo shows and timing events, the horse show proved both fascinating and profitable to the spectators.

Believing that they could learn different riding techniques from watching, the club attended the International Horse Show in early November. Emphasizing the correct position of an esquienne in either an English or Western saddle, the show featured Equitation and Hunter classes.

Primarily an interest club, the Mounted Generals included movies or speakers at club meetings which added to the group's understanding of "horse sense." Social activities included various hayrides.

National Beta Hosts Annual Thanksgiving Bonfire

National Beta reigned unique among the service clubs at Washington-Lee, in that it included both boys and girls. This has been because the club has special entrance requirements and is a nationally, not a school sponsored club.

Traditionally, the club has sponsored a bonfire the night of the annual football game with George Washington High School. This year was no exception, as several hundred W-Lites showed up with their admission ticket of "one piece of wood" in spite of freezing temperatures.

National Beta Service Club won first prize in the club competition in the Student Council's charity drive by contributing over 100 dollars to the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation.

Throughout the year, the club held money-making projects which included a door-to-door sale of donuts, and the Charity Ball held at W-L, as well as many service activities during the school year.

Nu Hangs Gay Decorations In Teachers' Lounge

Listening to problems encountered by members at bake sales, President Diane Coleman tries to find answers.

Upon completion of a successful bake sale, Nu members gather together to discuss plans for expected profit.

Nu Service Club enjoyed a very prosperous past year kicked off by a Senior Court clean-up. The members continued this task periodically throughout the year. Besides the customary projects of stuffing envelopes for the Tuberculosis Association, Nu donated a substantial amount of money to this year's charity drive. Club members raised the money through a raffle in which students bought tickets for the chance to win numerous prizes donated by local merchants.

Eager members spent many hours working on the club's entry in the G.W. float competition. A slumber party gave all new members a chance to acquaint themselves with the old members of the club. At Christmas all girls pitched in to donate a basket of food to a needy family. In the spring the club took up the project of decorating the second floor teachers' lounge. They decorated it for various holidays which included Valentine's Day, St. Patrick's Day and Easter.

OMEGA SERVICE CLUB

Omega Leads Crowd During Football Pep Rally

Washington Lee's Omega Service Club submerged itself this year in a busy round of activities to improve school spirit. Besides providing a sizeable portion of a membership of approximately thirty to the Go-Go Boys at every basketball game, the club staged a bona-fide cheerleading demonstration by "Stuart Cheerleaders" at a football pep rally. The franchise for selling soft drinks at home basketball games also belonged exclusively to Omega.

The Service Club provided a Santa Claus and several helpers to the Tau Service Club party for underprivileged children at Strawberry Cottage under Operation Headstart during the Christmas season. Further contributions to the community in the form of time, effort or money included stuffing envelopes for the Tuberculosis Association and donating to the annual Student Council sponsored charity drive for the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation.

PEP CLUB

Members Required To Work 4 Hrs. A Semester

Members of the Pep Club register mixed emotions when Anne Ludlow suggests planning yet another bake sale.

The Pep Club, along with the Cheer Leaders and Go-Go Boys, papered the walls of W-L with colorful posters which boosted school spirit and gave the teams moral support.

For the first time in its history at W-L, the Pep Club organized and adopted a constitution. One point stated that the members must earn four "hours" each semester by engaging in club activities. Members could attend athletic events, make posters, and sell or bake for bake-sales to accumulate participation time. Among the many new additions to the club's agenda included sitting with the Go-Go Boys at the Yorktown basketball game and co-ordinately cheering the players to victory.

In order to raise money to buy supplies, the Pep Club sold white pom-poms twice during the football season and held many bakesales after school.

The initiative and drive of the Pep Club members stimulated the enthusiasm of the student body to come out and cheer for the teams.

PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

Psychology Club Visits Staunton Mental Institute

Listed merely as an interest group, the Psychology Club aimed many of this year's activities towards assisting the school and community. In October these action-minded students sponsored an all-school assembly. The guest speaker, a psychologist from Saint Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, spoke on the qualities of leadership as he observed them in people he had known.

On alternating Tuesdays the members held tantalizing bake sales. These profits helped to build a fund which they then contributed to the Junior Village Orphanage. In addition, the girls devoted time and energy after school working with the children at the orphanage. Other civic activities included the construction of bean bags at Christmas and the solicitation of money for the Heart Fund Drive in February.

A trip to the Mental Institution in Staunton, Virginia, gave the members an insight into the problems of the mentally disturbed which most were unaware of.

PRO AND CON CLUB

Pro And Con Club Successfully Re-Established

A recent addition to the school, the Pro and Con Club re-established itself this year. The purpose of the club consisted discussing major issues of concern and controversy in the world.

During the year, members entertained such speakers as an expert on Red China who was a professor from George Washington University. American University sent a student representative who spoke on the United States foreign policy concerning Latin America. The club also invited such speakers as two members from the county board who discussed government budget problems, and a representative from the job corps who defended the corps' position. Senator Mike Mansfield, a guest of the Pro and Con Club at an April assembly, addressed the school on the possibility of lowering the voting age. They also held discussions on such diversified subjects as open housing and unidentified flying objects. As a source of funds, the Pro and Con Club held occasional pizza sales after school.

RED CROSS CLUB

Red Cross Club Sends Paperbacks To Soldiers

Boxing the paperback books, Paul Marionoble and Gloria Lee prepare them to be sent to soldiers in Vietnam.

Enthusiasm became "the" word of the Red Cross Club this year. In the fall, the club started off with an extremely successful paperback book drive. These books contributed to part of a county-wide Red Cross project to send ditty bags to soldiers in Viet Nam.

Soon after the book collection, members held the annual enrollment drive, which did not have as big a turn-out as expected. Gathering at one club member's house, the girls created centerpieces of pine to decorate tables for an annual adult Red Cross Convention held at the Marriot Hotel during the holidays. Along with the Christmas Spirit came the traditional stuffing of Christmas stockings, which members filled to the brim with candy.

A trip to Junior Village in February gave the children an afternoon of games and refreshments through the planning of club members. In conjunction with the O'Connell Red Cross Club, they organized and presented a party for the mentally retarded children in this area.

RESCUE SQUAD

Squad Gives Benefit Of First-Aid Knowledge

Meeting each week, enthusiastic members of the Washington-Lee Rescue Squad planned week-end activity assignments. Here they also discussed difficulties various members might have encountered while practicing necessary first-aid procedures.

Serving the student body and teams faithfully on the sidelines of each and every home football and basketball game of the year, members numbering approximately six boys stood ready for every imaginable emergency. Among other activities, the boys also aided the school administration during both air and fire drills, helping relieve congestion in the halls.

SAILING AND BOATING CLUB

Sailors, Boaters Pass Test, Enjoy Water Mastery

To the members of the Sailing and Boating Club, sailing included more than just enjoyment, work, and physical fitness, but also an accomplishment of being able to master a man-made system to the best ways of nature. The ideal situation would have been for the club to own boats of their own, which would mean building them from fiber glass and buying parts that could not be built.

To prove ability and achieve the goal, the sailors had to pass the Helmsman Test. This test showed how well the art of sailing had been mastered in both theory and practice. It included steering, use of the win, casting off, and a knowledge of all safety precautions, in addition to being able to handle the unexpected. The last part put the sailor in the boat alone; passing the test meant that the member could sail without an instructor.

Sailing and Boating Club sponsor Mr. Hans-Peter Klose explains the complicated process of boat construction.

Explaining exhibits found at the Biological Warfare Center, President Arent Wiken makes trip suggestions.

Senior Bev Diggle and Chris Cheney perform an experiment as they explore a scientific mystery together.

Club Members Explore Biological Warfare Center

One of the largest academic interest clubs at W-L, the Science Club's interesting projects and trips drew new members into the organization. At the annual mixer, a science knowledge quiz challenged the members. A team of juniors pitted skills and understanding of all branches of the scientific field against a team composed of sophomores and seniors.

An out-of-the-ordinary type of meeting took place in the fall, during which an experiment on controversial extrasensory perception, was conducted on the members.

The fortunate members had the opportunity to tour the Biological Warfare Center in Fort Detrick, Maryland. Here they found a variety of mosquito cultures, animal research quarter, and firefly cultures to study. Club members took on the responsibility of supervising the annual school science fair. Several months later, members used know-how to put up the area science fair, held this year at Wakefield.

SCUBA CLUB

Divers Probe Gloomy Depths Of Quarry Waters

Scuba Club members take poolside instructions while becoming familiar with the various diving equipment.

Water enthusiasts donned masks, fins, snorkles, air tanks and wet suits to pursue the sport of scuba diving. The process of getting all members certified headed the list of activities. Due to limited access to a pool, this job took until April. In order to become certified, members had to pass a test on water safety, and demonstrate swimming proficiency. The members strived to promote the sport of diving and to practice all the safety measures involved when in the water.

In the spring the club spent many enjoyable weekends on "outings". Visits to quarries near Halltown and Martinsberry in West Virginia became the most popular. In twenty-five to sixty feet of water the members explored the bottoms of these quarries and found some very interesting relics including beer cans, and parts of old cars. By the end of the year, members of the Scuba Club had become proficient in underwater skindiving, and had applied for membership in the Atlantic Skindiving Council.

SIGMA SERVICE CLUB

Club Gives Page-Turner To Community Of Hope

Changing a dollar at the Turkey Day Game, enthusiastic Sigma member Lynn Storie sells colored balloons.

This year Sigma members spent much of the time participating in many money raising projects. Some of these projects included the sale of helium balloons at the G.W. football game, greeting cards at Christmas-time, and sponges made by the members. The proceeds went towards the purchase of an automatic page-turner for the handicapped children at the Community of Hope in Keezletown. Members acquainted themselves with the community at a Pot-Luck dinner, at which a guest speaker from Hope answered questions.

Sigma also fulfilled an outstanding list of services towards the school and community. They adopted a ward at Arlington Community Hospital, and collected for UNICEF at Halloween time. Sigma spent much work on a float and the finished product made a fine showing in competition at the Turkey Day Game. Energetic girls caught the Christmas spirit and erected a Christmas tree at the Quincy Street entrance. As a gesture of gratitude, members baked cookies for the school's custodial staff.

Swim Club Sponsor Mr. C. S. Arthur goes over improvements needed among several members during practice.

Planning for participants in future swimming events takes up much time on the part of swim club members.

Winter months found most W-L students bundled in warm clothing, enjoying the sports that come with snow and cold temperatures. The more than twenty-five members of the Washington-Lee Swim Club paid no heed to the weather as they donned bathing suits and went swimming.

The group held early Saturday morning practices from the beginning of December until the middle of February in preparation for competition.

Though not a varsity sport, the Swim Club competed with similar clubs in area schools. A highly successful season included meets with O'Connell, Yorktown, T.C. Williams, and Fort Hunt. Each member entered competition in the event or events that they had become most skilled in. The contestants spent exhausting hours perfecting strokes and building speed and endurance. Boys and girls entered separate races, boys going longer lengths. The season ended officially in March with an All-Star Meet at which members competed among top swimmers.

SKI CLUB

Skiers Head For Slopes On Snowy Week-Ends

Senior Lynne Manov bundles up in happy anticipation of possible snowy slopes during a Ski Club meeting.

The Ski Club, concluding its third season of existence, boasted more action than any previous year. The club, with thirty-seven members, broke existing records by taking more skiing trips than ever before. The trips had at some times an attendance of as many as twenty-seven members taking advantage of the snowy slopes.

For conditioning exercises before the first skiing trip, members hiked both up the C&O Canal and in the Shenendoah Valley. They also went ice-skating at the Village House Ice-Skating Rink. During several of the club meetings the members viewed movies on skiing techniques. On the first trip, the novices received lessons which opened to them the world of ice, snow and thrills. The members explored the slopes throughout Virginia and Maryland.

The club took an active part in other school programs. They gave a successful dance in January with two bands and donated $150 of the money earned towards Multiple Sclerosis. Any remaining money went also to charity.

TEENAGE REPUBLICANS

TAR Members Host Annual Virginia Convention

The election machinery rolled at Arlington's Broyhill Auditorium and at individual candidate election headquarters during the fall of 1966. As the many Virginia and local campaigns began, W-L's branch of the county wide Teen-Age Republican organization contributed time and campaign experience to the organization of party meetings, precinct canvassing, shopping center publicity tours, and parades. On the school level the TAR co-sponsored the debate in the Little Theater between the two County Board candidates, Leo Urbanske and Ned Thomas. The highlight of the year's intra-party political finagling came as the Arlington Republican organizations played host to Virginia's annual TAR convention, held here in February.

Since the largely successful outcome of 1966 November's elections, the TAR established a small Capitol Hill office work force for special aid to Republican legislators. Among those helped have been Senator Curtis of Nebraska and Representative Broyhill of Northern Virginia.

Tau Float Takes Third In Turkey-Day Competitions

Interested Tau members devoted most of the time this year to project Headstart. Eager girls gave Halloween, Christmas, and Valentine parties for the children at Strawberry Cottage. Every six weeks the girls spent an afternoon entertaining mental patients at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. This included singing and handing out corsages as presents.

Not neglecting the school on the list of activities, Tau members spent Friday afternoons decorating the goalposts for home football games. As a grand climax of fall activities, Tau won third prize in the annual G.W. float competition.

The Christmas season brought about the annual sale of fruit cakes to help replenish the treasury. Members also mustered up all the singing talent and spent an enjoyable evening caroling. As a reward for all the time and effort spent by the members, Tau won the club of the quarter award contest sponsored by the SCA.

VARSITY DEBATE TEAM

Varsity Team Debates In Liberty Bell Tournament

Debating W-L's negative, Lee Area makes a point before his Wakefield Warrior opponent and the judges.

The only varsity sport which culminates more than four months of preparation with just eight weeks of competition is the Debate Team. Under the sponsorship of Mr. John Harocopos, the four varsity and twelve junior varsity members researched and practiced the topic "Resolved: The Foreign Assistance Program of the United States Should Be Limited to Non-Military Assistance" in scrimmages with other high schools before the official opening of the season on February 6. In an assembly before the entire student body, the debaters demonstrated ability.

The Debate Team had the privilege this spring to compete in the Liberty Bell Tournament in Philadelphia, at George Washington University, at William & Mary College, and with area high schools in the Potomac District. An impartial judge evaluated each school's part in the debate, which consisted of a six-minute constructive speech, a four-minute cross-examination, and a four-minute rebuttal by each member of the affirmative and negative teams.

VOCATIONAL OFFICE TRAINING

Representatives Speak To Junior High Students

Established to instill a greater sense of responsibility in Vocational Office Training students and to prepare them for future jobs, V.O.T. students were required to join the career club. The club proved effective in bringing the members in contact with more information concerning the field into which they planned to enter.

Representatives of the club went to county junior high schools to inform interested students of the program. During the spring, the club held an assembly in the Little Theater to encourage students to take advantage of the opportunities. The employee-employer luncheon at the Marriot Motor Hotel in the spring climaxed the year.

Guest speakers proved effective in guiding the careers of club members. The President of Clarendon Trust spoke to the members on the management analysis of I.B.M. The President of the Arlington Chapter of the Legal Secretarial Association spoke at one of the meetings on the opportunities in this field.

Maureen Melia utilizes a Vocational Office Training typewriter as he practices for a future occupation.

WELCOME CLUB

Welcome Club Members Guide Orientation Tours

Getting around in a strange building as large as Washington-Lee can prove quite frustrating without some assistance. The Welcome Club, in an effort to relieve some of the difficulties and uneasiness, held orientation tours for students new to the area several days before school began. Members welcomed new students by telephone, and sent letters to each one, informing them of the tours. In addition to this, new students coming later in the year received friendly welcomes from members of the club.

As the school year progressed and membership became established, opportunities for more projects presented themselves. Frustrated parents, lost in the halls going back to school for the fall open house found help from club members acting as guides.

The holiday season kept members of the Welcome Club busy. The cafeteria ladies enjoyed a seasonal party given them by the group. Members provided decorations and refreshments for the gala affair.

WLNS

Sale Of School Decals Boost WLNS Treasury

Listening to the financial problems of WLNS, member Bob Lewallen considers suggestions for a solution.

WLNS came into existence last year with the distinct objectives in mind of quieting the noisy atmosphere in the cafeteria and aiding in the attempt to make it a more pleasant place to eat. Several interested students started the operation over existing cafeteria loud-speakers, but soon found the acoustical coverage inadequate. WLNS enlisted financial help from clubs and classes as well as student co-operation in managing the cost of the equipment last year, but additional funds were required for a continuous school year of operation. This fall they met the problem with the W-L decal campaign in which five thousand of the school-designed emblems were ordered and sold by WLNS members.

The campaign did not mean that the problems of WLNS were completely solved, for the equipment obtained this year was unsatisfactory. But through the efforts of WLNS to raise the money and prepare the equipment in the cafeteria, next year's students are expected to enjoy music in the cafeteria.

The Elos Honor Society of Artistic Endeavor, composed of talented students, represented the fields of art, music, drama, and creative writing. To gain membership, the nominees performed before a board of Elos officers and student representatives from each of the fields.

January marked the highpoint for the society with the presentation entitled "What's Happening in the Arts Today" at a special assembly for seniors and selected juniors. The assembly consisted of students only, and included a performance of a musical piece written and performed by Elos members, the modeling of paper and steel dresses, and a "kinetic experience." Presented at night, this performance raised fifty dollars towards the annual scholarship awarded to the most deserving senior member. Creative bake sales, cake bakes, and car washes also headed the list as money raising projects. Donated to a cultural project, all excess money served a useful and worthwhile purpose to furthering interest in the arts.

FRENCH HONOR SOCIETY

Honor Society Produces Play Wholly In French

The French Honor Society remained alone among clubs and societies this year to conduct entire meetings in the language it represented. This demonstrated the proficient French spoken among Washington-Lee students and the desire these students had to improve the fluency with which they spoke the language.

The Honor Society did not concentrate solely on mastering the language but went further to expand the awareness of French customs in all members. They experienced real French cooking when they dined at French restaurants. In April they produced a play, "La Cantatrice Chauve" by Moliere, which they gave entirely in French, using only French Honor Society members as the actors.

Proving that the members retained an interest in other languages also, they paid the entrance fees for the Modern Language Tournament at O'Connell from the Society treasury. Members climaxed the school year with the annually held spring picnic.

The semi-annual induction ceremony took place early in the year for new German Honor Society members. German students chosen for special ability in the language performed many types of skits to the immense enjoyment of old members. According to tradition, after the completion of the songs, poems, and other forms of entertainment, the society voted unanimously to include the inductees in the elite group. A native German from Heidelberg described the city and other aspects of Germany today. Shop teacher Mr. Hans-Peter Klose agreed to speak at a winter meeting, and the members enjoyed listening to his ideas and thoughts of Germany. The spring induction brought extra members into the society and many laughs were shared by all. A rendering in German of "Snoopy vs. the Red Baron" topped the meeting.

To climax the year, members took a trip to a German restaurant in the area, decided upon by the society. The new members collected society pins and all found an opportunity to use the language and idioms.

LATIN HONOR SOCIETY

Candlelight Ceremony Marks Traditional Induction

At the first meeting of the Latin Honor Society, members chose enthusiastic officers for the year. Immediately they then set about planning future activities. An interesting visit to a Greek restaurant in Washington, D. C., set the scheme for the first major activity of the society. Here they were able to observe first-hand, various customs of the country. Other monthly meetings took place throughout the year in the evening in homes of members.

A traditional candlelight service accompanied the induction ceremony of eligible Latin students held annually in the spring. The next monthly meeting consisted of different types of skits presented by the newly inducted members for the pleasure of the old members. This was also designed in order for both old and new members to become acquainted with each other.

A picnic climaxed the full schedule of the year for everyone in the honor society as all enjoyed the out-of-doors at a fellow member's house.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Three Teacher Panel Analyzes American Morality

Starting the school year on a fresh note, the National Honor Society held the induction of new members in a school-wide assembly. Those meeting eligibility requirements included juniors completing the sophomore year with a 3.5 average and seniors finishing as juniors with 3.2 average. Extra curricular activities and the overall character of each nominee also influenced the consideration for membership.

The highlight of the year proved to be the three teacher panel discussion on the controversial subject of morality. Students posed questions and gave individual opinions relating to the subject.

Spring brought the second semester induction ceremony. Sophomores earning a 4.0 grade average became eligible for membership.

The school year concluded with the annual National Honor Society Banquet given by the PTA in honor of NHS members and parents.

SCIENCE HONOR SOCIETY

Goddard Space Center Toured By SHS Members

With Meredith Smith as the guinea pig the Science Honor Society demonstrates effects of atomic generators.

There was good reason to give the W-L Science Honor Society the prize during the first judging period as Honor Society of the Season. A list of dedicated officers worked throughout the summer in preparation for the coming year, and the planning paid off in the form of activities the society was able to participate in during the year. Field trips were taken to Goddard Space Flight Center and to the Naval Research Laboratory facilities, both in Maryland. The honor society also sent a delegation to the grand opening of the new National Bureau of Standards.

The Science Honor Society instituted a new policy with the area scientists invited to meetings as speakers; they returned the visit to the scientists' own labs if enough of the membership was interested. A scientific lesson was presented to the student body with the January assembly feature of "This Atomic World", but with the Science Honor Society-sponsored dance held on April 15, science went really pop.

Resuming previously discontinued services this year, W-L's chapter of the nation-wide Spanish Honor Society attempted to become a more active organization than during previous years. This year's inspired officers planned a comparatively full list of activities with the society's new sponsor. It was decided by a vote of the membership during the first meeting of the year to post sign-up sheets in all lower-level Spanish classes for interested students needing tutoring. Spanish Honor Society members conducted help sessions at intervals of two weeks throughout the year.

Members baked cakes for sale to teachers in response to Student Council appeals for help from clubs in the annual charity drive. During the winter plans were made to send delegates to a special language convention and to attend the visiting Ballet Folklorico in a spring finale. The year culminated however in the traditional dessert and candlelight induction ceremony for the society's new members.

The first activity on the Thespians' long list concerned participation in the Yorktown Theater Day. Members of the honor society discussed and exchanged many ideas with Yorktown counterparts. The production of Look Homeward, Angel climaxed fall events by playing to two full houses. Members of the club also participated in a Theater Convention in Roanoke, Virginia. Representatives from many state high schools took part in the three day conference. Christmas-spirited Thespians spent an enjoyable night carolling.

The Thespians inserted an extra stage treat besides the regular fall and spring plays with the production of Spoon River Anthology, which set new attendance records. The cast gave two special performances of this production, one for the Wisconsin exchangees and the other for the english and art secondary school teachers. Besides the production of plays, the Thespians provided light and lighting effects for various school dances including the Turkey Hop, Charity Ball, and the Junior Prom.

TIKOS MATH HONOR SOCIETY

Tikos Members Instruct Struggling Math Students

Tikos, the honor society for those with exceptional mathematical abilities, began the year in search of new members. Any student receiving an A average in each of two preceeding years of college preparatory math became eligible for membership consideration. After being accepted into the society, an overall 3.2 average must have been maintained.

Endowed with a vast numerical knowledge, Tikos members aided students having math difficulties in after-school help sessions. Club requirements called for each member to attend at least seven help sessions during the year. The society also posted a bulletin board at the Stafford Street entrance of the school.

Once a month Tikos held a meeting at which speakers and outstanding students in relating subjects spoke to the group, answered individual questions, and helped pursue the club interests.

Aiding a needy math student with his homework, Tikos member Connie Knowles explains a concept in Algebra.

VARSITY FOOTBALL

Victorious Generals Make Successful Comeback

The Washington-Lee Generals not only captured the Potomac District championship by game winnings, but also presented the best offense and defense in the league. W-L's offense racked up a total of 208 points to the opponents 71.

For long hours of hard practice and dedicated work, many boys won honors. Co-captain Mike Trainum, acclaimed top lineman, and Al Forman, ranked top defensive lineman, won All-Metro Honorable Mention. John Tyler and Greg Scales held All-Potomac and All-Suburban Honorable Mentions as defensive backfield stars.

The Generals made a successful attempt at a comeback this year. In the three losses that blemished the record this year the gridsters made a good showing in each. Playing two top-rated teams, the Generals were the only team to score against Fairfax and barely lost to Annandale 6-3. Besides beating top-rated teams, the Generals blanked Langley, McLean, and G.W.

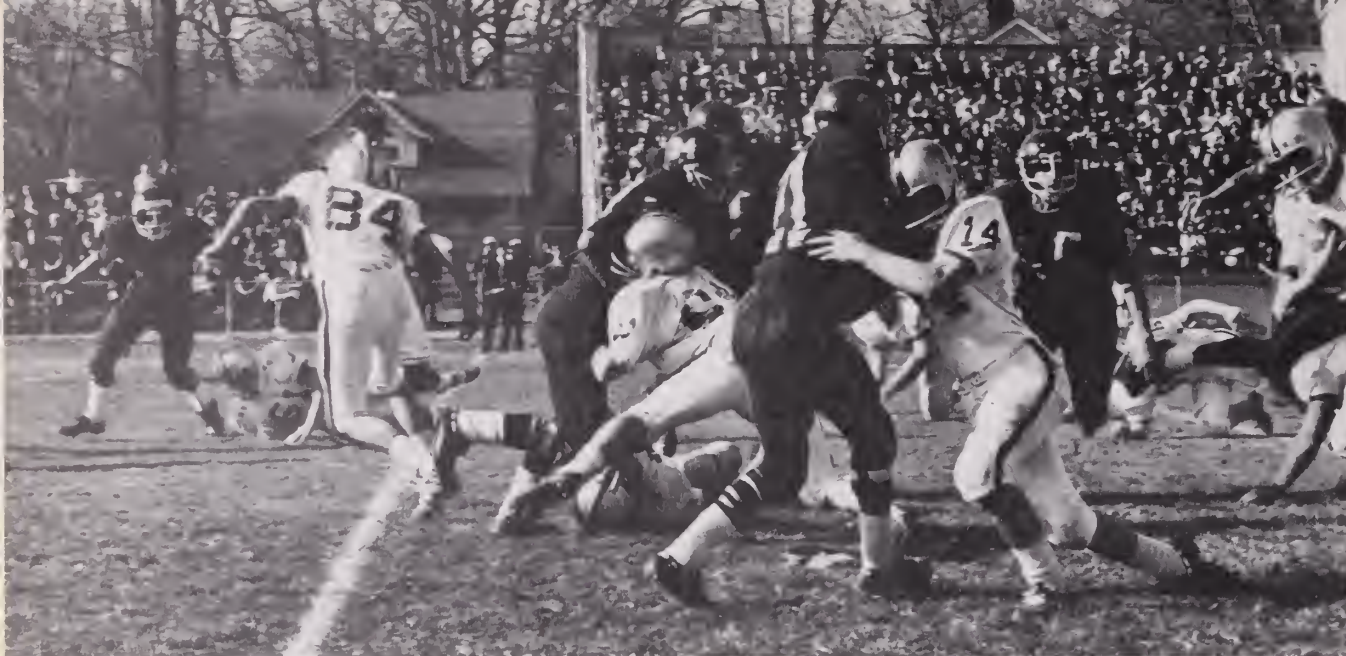

Jim Alley employs some evasive tactics to elude a McLean defender in a district win over the Highlanders.

Quarterback Mike Slade completes a pass on a rollout to senior end Ken Matts in the 6-3 loss to Annandale.

Slashing out for a gain and a later touchdown set up, Mike Slade darts off tackle in the Turkey Day game.

Returning a kick up the sideline, sophomore halfback Reggie Harrison gallops for yardage against Yorktown.

Nolan Forness sprints around end to pick up a first down and extra yards in the 14-14 tie with Yorktown.

Leaping high into the air, end Ken Matts snags a pass from Rick Beale to score six points against Stuart.

"Baby Generals" Place Third Among ARL Schools

The "Baby Generals" compiled a final record of 5-2-2 this year to place third among four Arlington County schools. The J.V. was 2-2-2 against competitors in the Potomac District. Losing only to Stuart and Wakefield, the team outscored opponents 141-45. Spearheading the J.V. gridsters attack were co-captains Billy Ford and Brian Hillburn.

Outstanding participants on the football squad this year were Aaron Carpenter, the top pass receiver, and Laymar O'Neil, the leading rusher on the team. Carpenter caught 12 passes for 251 yards while O'Neil carried 102 times for 402 total yards. The players also chose boys to receive other top honors. John Adams and Mike Stanton won in the Most Improved category while Norris Sills and Parris Woodbury nabbed best blocker honors. The team voted Bill Long and Earl Parkham as Best Tacklers and the Most Valuable Player awards went to Joe Carroll and Laymar O'Neil.

Washington-Lee climaxed the 1966-1967 basketball season with a decisive victory against McLean followed by losses to Wakefield and Stuart for a second place in the district and a 14-5 overall record. The Varsity Basketball Team extended the 1965-1966 season's winning streak to sixteen games before dropping the contest to Woodson 40-32 in December. A loss was avenged the last week of the season.

The Little Generals' Big Men led the team statistics-wise. Center Dave Logan at 6'8" was high average scorer with 9.6 points. Second highest scorer, forward Gene Otis, took the rebound title with an average of 9 per game, trailed by Martin and Logan. With an 84% hitting average, Rick Martin led the team as top foul shooter.

Led by Co-Captain Chris Midgett and Arno Livingston, this year's grappling squad jumped off to a fast start. A victory string of seven was tallied before a loss to the runner-up state champion, Annandale. A total dual meet record of nine wins and three losses was compiled, one less than last year.

Wrestling to a second place in the Northern Virginia Regional, W-L put two men in the state tournament. Dennis Wagner captured first place in the regional while fighting his way to fourth place in the State Meet. Along with Dennis, Chris Midgett was a minuteman this year. Varsity wrestler Ronny McInturff holds his Annandale opponent in a pinning combination for a near fall.

Co-Captain Arno Livingston is on top in the advantage position riding his Annandale counterpart for time.

The General's 103 lb. class wrestler senior Bob Gilbert breaks down Coleman of Annandale during a match.

JUNIOR VARSITY WRESTLING

Junior Varsity Matmen Prove Strength, Balance

The 1966-67 junior varsity grapplers scored heavily in the upper weight classes to defeat opposing teams. Injuries were at a minimum, while the main foe proved to be colds and the flu. Coach Dana Pond drilled his team well and prepared them fully for all opponents as statistics clearly show.

The "Baby Generals" outdid their counterparts in takedowns (6.7 per match to 5.8), falls (4.2 per match to 1.6), and in total team points, an average of 33 points per match to 17. High scoring honors went to Paul Wegner, who was undefeated at 41-0.

Although the junior varsity team lost three matches and had a slightly poorer record (9-3) than last season's 12-1, they used fewer juniors this season, indicating "good team strength and balance."

CROSS COUNTRY

Team Places Seventh At Wakefield Invitational

The Washington-Lee Cross Country team ably defended its two year Virginia State reign though it was once again defeated at the Northern Virginia Regional by Wakefield. The team placed third with three runners in the top twenty at the meet. Artie Richmond, Co-Captain Bob Youman, and Pete Senechal led the field for W-L.

In October the team placed seventh in the annual Wakefield Invitational. The top finisher was sophomore John Davis, who finished twenty-first out of the field of one hundred and forty. At the Winter sports awards assembly, junior Artie Richmond won the most valuable runner award, the only cross-country award to be given.

SOCCER

W-L Completes Third Successful Soccer Season

Practice for the 1966-67 soccer team began in November, during which several key players were lost due to injuries.

At Bethesda, the first team was won 4 to 1, during which the Generals scored in every period of the game. The team attributed much of the credit to the special trademark of defense.

Washington-Lee's third successful season ended with a home-game victory over Blue Ridge Prep in February. Center forward Raul Aicardi hit a new season scoring record with thirteen goals, which tied senior Mike Schwelien's record for most goals in one game. The final scores were 17 wins, 1 loss, and 2 ties.

Watching the ball in flight, soccer team members brace themselves, in anticipation of action during practice.

Stuart Meyerson tests his kicking skill while further down the field Nidal Mahayni practices his dribbling.

GYMNASTICS

Gymnasts Place Fourth In Univ. Of Va. Meet

The gymnastics season opened against Wakefield, cross-country rivals and defending state champions. The seventh annual Yorktown Invitational provided a gathering of ten area teams in which W-L placed third. At the University of Virginia meet, gymnasts placed fourth, and junior Brad O'Neill placed seventh in All-Around Competition including events on the trampoline and side horse, in addition to tumbling, vaulting, and floor exercises. Co-Captain Ed Tomlinson won an All-Around ninth place in the competition.

The sixteen man team was mainly composed of juniors; eight of the team were returning lettermen from last year. Led by Co-Captains Ed Tomlinson and Dave Woodside on the high bar, free exercise, and still rings, the team was backed up by Brad O'Neill and Scott VanCleaf, captains-elect for next year.

WINTER TRACK

W-L Winter Track Places Fifth In VMI Meet

After a short one week allowance time for practice, the Winter Track Team started its season on December 10. Though number one trackman Del Gardner proved outstanding in both the hurdles and the broad jump, W-L lost to Woodbury Forest 57-48. The team recovered with successes against Episcopal and Hammond with the valuable aid of Co-Captains Del Gardner and Bob Youman.

At the end of February was the battle of the area's top public and private schools at the Episcopal Northern Virginia Invitational at which two athletes were entered in each event. Reggie Harrison won first place in the shot put, Del Gardner first in the long jump, and Greg Scales second in the high jump. W-L terminated its Winter Track season with a fifth place in the State at VMI.

CREW

Varsity 8 Works-Out With Local College Crews

Coach Charlie Butt made this year's Varsity Eight ready for all high school competition by scheduling a series of work-outs with local college crews. Georgetown, George Washington University, and the Navy Plebes worked out with the "Generals" during the regular practice week. On weekends the W-L Crew made trips to Princeton, Connecticut, and raced Pennsylvania on the Potomac for tougher competition to ready them for such big races as the Stotesbury and the Nationals.

The mark of the oarsmen this year was size and depth; eighty-five men composed the rowing crew, all of them fighting for top positions. The size of the varsity averaged 6 feet 1 inch and weighed in at 178 pounds with the junior varsity not far behind.

The W-L lightweights shove off from the float and paddle for open river before the first race of the year.

A Hammond rower waits at the float to congratulate W-L after a two length victory by our Varsity Eight crew.

Jim Baldwin and Fred Hipple adjust their stretchers while discussing race strategy in the Haringer shell.

Three members of the crew discuss the possibilities of motorizing their shell before a race in Alexandria.

As Bill Lovegrove waves to the camera, stroke Mark Cole-son worries of the upcoming race with Williams.

VARSITY BASEBALL

Champs Defend Title During 20 Game Season

Concentrating on the potential outcome of his pitch, Mike Slade executes his wind-up at one of W-L's games.

The defending Potomac District champion baseball team began its twenty game season at the end of March. Seven returning lettermen included outfielders Ken Matts and Rick Beale, infielders Bill Thompson and Steve Goldsmith, pitchers Mike Slade and Jerry Tassa, and catcher Dale Wortham. Ken Matts was the top returning batter with an average of .326 during the last season. Mike Slade headed the top returning pitchers with a 7-1 1966 record.

In practice games W-L tied the Edison team 3-3 after nine innings and lost to the Maryland Frosh 6-0. The team dropped its opening game to Fort Hunt by a score of 6-1. Ken Matts scored the only run in the first inning.

OUTDOOR TRACK

'Generals' Second Wakefield In Haringer Relays

W-L won its first meet against O'Connell with a score of 99-23. In the second annual Haringer Relays held at W-L, Wakefield won while the Generals came in second.

After the relay and sprint medley squads raced Eastern Relays, the team joined to play against George Washington and twenty other teams from Arlington Fairfax, Alexandria, D.C., and Maryland at the Alexandria Relays.

Crucial to the team were Reggie Harrison, Del Gardner, and Greg Scales. Don Orndorff, John Tyler, Craig Kaster, Dave Williamson, John Carmichael, Bob Youman, John Davis, and Pete Senechal also proved key performers.

David Williamson, part of W-L's record breaking mile relay team, passes the baton to anchorman Bob Youman.

Junior sprinter Johnny Carmichael strains in order to gain a sizeable lead in a relay event at a dual meet.

VIRGINIA LURR

Manager of Basketball, '26, '27; Vaudeville, '26; Foreign Language Club, '26; Glee Club, '26; Athletic Association, '26, '27; President of Latin 101, '26; Contributing Editor for "The Virginian," '27.

A student, an athlete, and a popular girl is Virginia. We are greeted every morning by her cheery voice and smile. On such deep subjects as Math, she excels, and when it comes to basketball, our Virginia is a "seven-day wonder."

RUTH GERMAINE

Columbia Junior High School; Dramatic Club, Associate Editor of "The Virginian."

To predict great success for Ruth is no evidence of our farsightedness, for she has proved her worth in every phase of High School life. As a writer, actress, and scholar she has undoubtedly shown unusual merit. All her talents combined with a very charming personality, point towards a brilliant future clearly visible in the offing.

ELIZABETH GIDEON

Western High School, '23; Business High School, '24, '25; Glee Club, '26; Athletic Association, '26, '27; Vaudeville, '26, Vice-President of Senior Class, Editor-in-chief of "The Virginian."

One of the most gifted, versatile, and popular girls in our class. In one respect, a very serious-minded student, but with none of the mock gravity that often goes with such a trait; in another, a charming dancer and wonderful entertainer. She says her great ambition is to become the wife of a doctor.

CHARLOTTE HAGAN

Western High School, '25; Athletic Association, '25, '26, '27; Dramatic Club, '25, '26; Debating Society, '26, '27.

Charlotte came to us from Western and immediately won our hearts. Last year she represented us in the oratorical contest, and such a worthy representative she proved to be! "Sally," as she is affectionately called by the class, has great ambition and will be unusually successful.

Cherie Odeen, 10-1; Rob Schultz, 10-2;
Granville Sharpe, 10-3; Brenda O'Grady, 10-4;
Adele Wilson, 10-5.

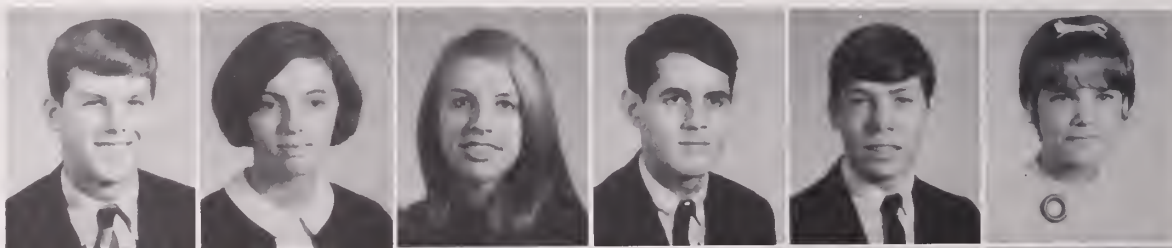

In order that the incoming sophomores would truly fit into life at W-L, both the junior and senior classes pooled efforts with several projects to help accustom the new class to Washington-Lee.

The seniors started on the first day of school with the now traditional "Big Brothers" program, explaining the responsibilities of every W-L student. The juniors furthered the cause with a get-acquainted dance for the members of the sophomore class.

The sophs took the initiative and started the ball rolling with the election of class officers early in the fall. The class of '69 and its officers accepted the various responsibilities of school life, starting with an artistically designed float which took third place in class competition at the annual Turkey Day Game.

Other activities included the ever popular competition of the sophomore-faculty basketball game, and the presentation of the annual Easter Assembly.

JUNIOR CLASS

Junior Class Paints Bleachers For G. W. Game

With its usual enthusiasm and drive, the Junior class started activities long before September. Summer months found members of the Class of '68 working hard on school pennants, a large class flag, and a mascot. The pennants were later sold as a fund raising project.

The holiday season kept the diligent juniors working. Armed with paint and brushes, juniors invaded the stadium, painting row and seat numbers on the stands. Months of planning and preparation paid off as the class again presented the first-place winning float for the Thanksgiving Day Game. Organizing the traditional Christmas Assembly gave many a chance to show class spirit.

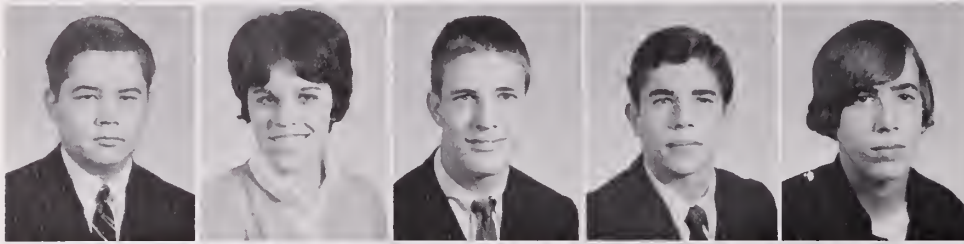

The new year brought the annual chaos of ordering class rings. Waiting for the Spring day when seniors would slip on the rings, proved difficult for many.

Closing the year with the same eagerness and zest with which it began, the Class of '68 enjoyed the Junior Prom as a perfect finale to a rewarding junior year.

SENIOR CLASS

Seniors Sponsor Class Of '69 Orientation Day

Gordon Macrae, 12-1; Matt Redman, 12-2; Larry German, 12-3; Russ Bolling, 12-4; Donna Griffin, 12-5; Dave Price, 12-6.

From the Morp to the Prom, the Senior Class of 1967 displayed the qualities of intelligence, leadership, and school spirit that three unforgettable years at Washington-Lee instilled.

Before the commencement of the fall semester, the seniors sponsored a sophomore orientation day to familiarize the new W-Lites with the organization and administration of the school. In accordance with this program, several of the seniors acted as "Big Brothers and Sisters" in a sophomore homerooms to answer any additional questions the underclassmen might have had.

Throughout the year projects such as the Thanksgiving Assembly and the Senior-Sponsored Art Show highlighted the days of glory for the class of '67.

The thrilling Senior Prom and solemn Graduation brought mixed emotions to all seniors as they suddenly realized that three wonderful years had come to an end and that now they were on the verge of a new adventure.

Barbara Whetstone, 12-7; Sheila Brannan, 12-8; Mary Emurian, 12-9; Pete Danforth, 12-10; Nolan Forness, 12-11; Bere Todd, 12-12.

Janet McMahon, 12-13; Roger Graham, 12-14; Helen Simpson, 12-15; Karen Fletcher, 12-16; Bruce Halliburton, 12-17; Brian Woodrow, 12-18.

Gil Anderson, 12-19; Mac Estabrook, 12-20; Sue Speake, 12-21; Kay Gauzza, 12-22; Bob Jack, 12-23; Bob Mahan, 12-24.

International House of Pancakes

935 North Stafford St.
Arlington, Va.
522-3118

Who says pancakes are just for breakfast? Sue Gantt and Dave Logan are willing to argue that point with anyone. They've found the International House of Pancakes to be the perfect spot for after-school unwinding. If you don't feel quite up to one of their towering stacks of hotcakes, you can still drop by for a coke. However, it's hard to understand how anyone could resist a steaming plate of pancakes, topped with one of their six syrups. For a unique experience, try the International House of Pancakes.

Adam Clayton Powell speaks at a special press conference on the island of Bimini off the Florida coast, his first meeting with reporters since he was barred from taking his seat in Congress. Wide World Photos.

WALT DISNEY... 1901-1966

NEWS BEYOND THE SCHOOL

The Crucifix, a painting of Christ by the 13th Century artist Cimabue, is a tragic memorial to the Florence flood. The waters also brought severe damage to many priceless renaissance art objects. Wide World Photos.

Charred remains of the Apollo 1 capsule attest to the fire in which three astronauts lost their lives. NASA.

The war continues. A soldier moves cautiously across a native-built bridge; the 327th Infantry penetrates a jungle thicket near Dak To on part of the search and destroy operation "Beauregard." Defense Dept. Photo.
